The case is one from Graham countr, where a druggist was convicted in the superior court, though evidence was introduced that the sale involved was not made with intent to violate the statists. The lover court instructed the mry that the motive that lay behind the sale was immaterial. It is claimed that most of the substitutes for whisky now being manufactured in Arizona have Jamaica ginger as their base, both for the alcohol contained and the "bile" that indicates to the drinker that has been imbibling something material.
